

Attack on freedom all over the world

All over the world in these times, there is an attack on freedom, on religious freedom; in this country there is no difference. In these times you are being faced with an enormous challenge on religious freedom and most importantly, on conscience of faith.

It is your inalienable right granted to you in the Bill of Rights; if you do this right, to worship according to your conscience. It must never be questioned, nor must anyone say: `that's no longer important`.

When the government of a nation disposes of the right of all individuals in that country, to have that conscience of their faith, and that's what is at stake now.

If you look carefully at the history of mankind, you will see that whenever religious freedom is brought into play, whenever it is being removed from a society, historically you will then see that it is just the tip of the iceberg. Other rights will go very quickly after that. And now in these times, this country is about to be faced with that challenge.

I live in London, England; and several months ago, we awoke to a newspaper headline saying: " Britain bans public prayer". Every one of us were more than shocked. How is it possible that overnight this was being removed? We cannot pray in schools we cannot pray in public places such as the employment, and now the government is telling us that we cannot pray in public meetings. Where does it stop?

Many societies now are declaring themselves secular. Secular simply means to exist without God, the rule of God, the laws of God, the Commandments of God. And I ask you this: How is it possible that people just like you and I have become so deceived to believe that there can be a future without God? But that's what they are saying. And in London now it is not unusual to see these big double decker buses with signs on the sides saying : "God is dead" "God does not exist" or "Many people are gay, get over it".

And people go about their daily lives in Europe in these times, in a way that we are now facing a very real crisis.

We are facing a crisis of faith and as a result a crisis of the family. We are approaching one in every two catholic marriages ending in separation or divorce. Most of our seminaries are virtually empty.

In London, we are closing churches, because we don't have the people within those parishes to support that church.

We are importing priests from Africa, who barely speak English just to keep the mass schedules going. All over Europe, that is the trend that is happening.

First Commandment: 'To love God'. In these times, we are not even keeping the First Commandment, and that has to change if our societies are going to survive; because if I remain silent and if I continue to see the corruption and the decay in my society, if I can continue to see those who administer the laws, remove God from those laws; then, when it comes the time for my child to take over, what inheritance am I going to be giving that child, in one generation from now? We must act now, while there is time.
